Eliminating Clichés:

The Evolution of Jerzy Grotowski's Self-revealing Encounters

(1957-1970)

NG Yee Ki

A thesis submitted in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of

Master of Philosophy

Principal Supervisor: Dr. LEE Wai Sum

Hong Kong Baptist University

September 2011
Abstract

Being narrowed down as a theatre innovation, the value and significance of Jerzy Grotowski’s self-revealing investigation is often overlooked and underestimated. To explore the value of his works, an elementary investigation which responds to the unique features of his pursuit and loopholes of the existing studies is necessary. This dissertation suggests using the notions of encounter and cliché as the keys to understand his works. By analyzing the evolution of the form of encounter induced by different theatrical forms employed by him, and the changing notion of cliché implied in the corresponding forms in 1957-70, this dissertation seeks to explore the essence of Grotowski’s work-based and methodology-oriented investigation.

In chapter one, I have explained my methodology in relation to the unique features of Grotowski’s pursuit and the current methodologies approaching his works. Subsequently, chapter two focused on the analysis of the assumption of and rationale behind his self-revealing investigation in relation to different sources of influence, especially Hindu’s philosophy and Stanislavski’s Method of Physical Actions. In chapter three, by analyzing the three forms of encounter (i.e. text-oriented, scenography-oriented and actor-oriented encounter) which were identified in his theatrical productions in 1957-70, the clichés implied and wholeness revealed are examined. In Chapter four, by examining the metamorphosis of the Grotowski’s notion of encounter, clichés and wholeness, the value and significances of Grotowski’s self-revealing investigation and this dissertation were evaluated.

By analyzing the shortcomings of existing research and exhibiting my own methodology, this dissertation could possibly enrich the current studies on Grotowski.
Besides, the discovery of the self-revealing possibilities in the analysis of Grotowski’s pursuit was believed to be inspiring to the development of education, theatre and self-exploration of individual in Hong Kong.
Table of Contents

Declaration ............................................................................................................. ii
Abstract .............................................................................................................. iii
Acknowledgement ................................................................................................. v
Table of Content .................................................................................................... vii

Chapter I Introduction: Approaching the Enigma of Jerzy Grotowski
as a Kinsman ........................................................................................................ 1

Chapter II Grotowski’s Self-revealing Investigation ........................................... 44

Chapter III Clichés Removed Through Spectacle-making ................................. 100
  Phase I: Text-oriented Encounter ..................................................................... 103
  Phase II: Scenography-oriented Encounter .................................................... 146
  Phase III: Actor-oriented Encounter ................................................................ 178

Chapter IV Conclusion .......................................................................................... 222

References ........................................................................................................... 255

Curriculum Vitae .................................................................................................. 265