Cooperativism as Ethical Practice

A Study of Worker Cooperatives in Hong Kong

WONG Shuet Ying

A thesis submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of

Master of Philosophy

Principal Supervisor:  Dr. LEUNG Hon Chu

Hong Kong Baptist University

June 2009
ABSTRACT

Under capitalist hegemony, demeaning work is rationalized as necessary to achieve wealth accumulation and ever increasing consumption. Both the right and the left are skeptical about worker cooperatives as an alternative to capitalist organization of work. Review of the existing literature, however, suggests that the development of coops is an open-ended process rather than a predetermined matter. In Hong Kong, a number of worker coops were founded in response the economic downturn in the early 2000s, primarily by middle-aged, lowly educated, workers under the sponsorship of NGOs. An overview of cooperatives in Hong Kong shows that they suffer from a restrictive system of regulation and lack of recognition of the values of cooperatives. An intensive study of a particular case, the CR Coop, however, demonstrates, while it is difficult, it is far from impossible to practice cooperativism in capitalistic Hong Kong. It confirms that, various structural and internal challenges notwithstanding, people can achieve meaningful and dignified work with democratic collective decision-making and bottom-up management, if they can learn to work together with mutual regards. Through their courage and imagination, people can establish a set of practices and new interpretation of the meanings of work that treat workers as ends rather than means and allow them better coordination between work and other values in life. With a supportive social and political environment, worker cooperatives can thrive as an ethical practice and the aspiration for an inclusive society in Hong Kong is not utopian.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Declaration........................................................................................................ i
Abstract......................................................................................................... ii
Acknowledgments........................................................................................... iii
Table of Contents.......................................................................................... v
List of Abbreviations................................................................................... ix

Chapter 1
Introduction ......................................................................................... 1

Chapter 2
Literature Review ............................................................................... 6
1. Understanding the Social Construction of Capitalistic Hegemony .............. 6
2. A Retort upon “All-Powerful” Capitalism: Cooperativism as Alternative....... 12
3. Beyond Viability: Cooperativism as Ethical Practice.................................. 17
   3.1 Plywood Coop....................................................................................... 18
   3.2 Mondragon Coop Complex................................................................. 23
4. Research Questions.................................................................................. 31

Chapter 3
Research Method ............................................................................... 33
1. Unit of Analysis and Sampling................................................................... 33
2. Entrance to the Field................................................................................ 34
3. Major Data-collection Method................................................................... 35
   3.1 Concerns and Solution......................................................................... 35
   (A) A Review for the Role of Ethnographer: Davis, Junker and Gold, Adler and Adler................................................................................................. 36
   (B) Deployment of the Positioning of Researcher...................................... 40
   (C) Special Arrangement on the Visiting Schedule to the Field............... 41

Chapter 4
Overview of Cooperatives in Hong Kong .......................................... 44
1. Historical Development of Cooperative in Hong Kong............................. 44
2. Recent Positions of the Hong Kong Government in Coops....................... 51
   2.1 The Commission on Poverty (CoP) and Social Enterprise.................. 51
   2.2 The Hong Kong’s official interpretation of social enterprise............. 54
   2.3 Corresponding highlights of actions of the CoP................................. 56
   (A) Self-help based assistances............................................................... 56
   (B) Joining hand with the business sector and the wider community....... 58
   (C) The assistances should not upset the ideas of “fair competition”...... 61
2.4 Theoretical assumptions of the CoP...................................................... 63
(A) Market is neutral and just................................................................. 64
(B) The able-bodied unemployed and the difficulties of social enterprises are 66 the result of individual failures............................................................

2.5 Third Way as the tentative position of the government..................... 68
3. Recently Formed Worker Coops in Hong Kong: Survey Findings........... 75
3.1 Characteristics of participants......................................................... 75
3.2 Characteristics of the worker coop.................................................... 77
4. Conclusion.......................................................................................... 79

Chapter  5 The Founding of the CR Coop................................. 84
1. Starting a little convenience store..................................................... 84
   1.1 Mother of the CR Coop............................................................... 84
   1.2 The 1st membership recruitment: founding members of the CR Coop..... 86
   1.3 Learning, practicing and building a business in an unconventional way... 87
2. Running and maintaining the little convenience store........................ 92
   2.1 Venue......................................................................................... 92
   2.2 Working hours........................................................................... 96
   2.3 The 2nd membership recruitment: the team of coop members when I started the fieldwork.............................................................................. 99
   2.4 Collective decision making......................................................... 100
   2.5 Arrangement of working schedule.............................................. 102
   2.6 Other division of labor............................................................... 105
   2.7 Financial situation...................................................................... 106
3. Conclusion.......................................................................................... 111

Chapter  6 The Challenges for the CR Coop............................. 115
1. Challenge: Ban on the sale of home-made food............................... 115
2. Challenge: Fighting the rights for worker cooperatives and promoting the ideas of cooperativism in Hong Kong.......................................................... 125
3. Challenge: The 1st contract extension............................................. 136
4. Challenge: Running a small catering canteen.................................. 156
5. Challenge: The 2nd contract extension.......................................... 163
6. Conclusion.......................................................................................... 169

Chapter  7 Practice of Cooperativism at the CR Coop.................. 176
1. Control by Owner VS Democratic member control.......................... 176
   Ideas in action.................................................................................. 178
   (A) Unique structure of organization................................................. 178
   (B) Meetings and negotiations.......................................................... 180
Difficult problems and its relief…………………………………………………………. 185
(A) Personal prejudices………………………………………………………………….. 185
(B) The culture of picking the wrong of others………………………………………. 186
(C) Collective egoism……………………………………………………………………. 187
2. Top-down management VS Autonomy at work…………………………………….. 189
Ideas in action………………………………………………………………………………. 191
(A) Overcome the reliance on authority and entrust the operation to workers without formal supervision……………………………………………………………………. 191
(B) Negotiation and open discussion…………………………………………………… 196
Difficult problems and its relief………………………………………………………... 197
(A) Dawdling……………………………………………………………………………… 197
(B) Refusal to self-reflect, accept criticism and listen to advice………………………… 200
3. Work comes first VS Balance between working and personal life………………….. 203
Ideas in action……………………………………………………………………………… 205
(A) Negotiable-and-autonomous working arrangement……………………………… 205
(B) Flexible day off with preference sheet……………………………………………… 206
(C) Working out a compromise schedule with the “shift organizer”………………….. 206
Difficult problems and its relief…………………………………………………………. 207
(A) Selfish calculation…………………………………………………………………… 207
(B) Dispute over the “fair” and “ideal” working arrangement………………………… 208
4. Normalizing the fading security at work VS Strengthening employment security……………………………………………………………………………… 211
Ideas in action……………………………………………………………………………… 213
(A) Build the proper employment relationship through mutual probation……….. 213
(B) Zero lay-off and better labor benefits……………………………………………… 215
(C) Innovative assessment for surplus allocation……………………………………… 217
Difficult problems and its relief…………………………………………………………. 218
(A) Complicated and lengthy recruitment……………………………………………… 218
(B) Hesitation in recruiting new members……………………………………………… 220
5. Workers as means VS Workers as ends……………………………………………. 222
Ideas in action……………………………………………………………………………… 225
(A) Open membership…………………………………………………………………… 225
(B) Education and training……………………………………………………………… 227
(C) Capability building through multi-dimensional development…………………… 228
Difficult problem and its relief………………………………………………………….. 230
(A) Social exclusion towards worker coop……………………………………………. 230
6. Conclusion……………………………………………………………………………….. 232

Chapter 8 Conclusion…………………………………………………………………... 235

Appendices………………………………………………………………………………… 243